The Glasgow and Inveraray Steamboat Company operated a popular service to the Kyles of Bute, using two fine paddle steamers both named Lord of the Isles. The first was built in 1877. It was replaced by the second Lord in 1891 - which was well known on the river until it was broken up in 1928. Today, only the Waverley remains of the once-great fleet of paddle steamers which sailed along the Clyde.
