The William Tyler

Yardley, Birmingham

Farming was the way of life in Yardley into the early 20th century. The centuries-old trade of tile-making was first carried out by famers and also lasted into modern times. Yardley was ideally situated on a bed of 'particularly good red clay'. The first written record of tile making is in a document of 1402 and refers to a William Tyler. The tile- and brick-making industry blossomed over the years and, at one time, Yardley had at least 17 kilns.
